BACKGROUND

Carol Zou is a Texangelena by way of the Chinese diaspora. Her work focuses on questions of layered human geographies, craft as non-western cultural production, and polyvocality through a community organizing model. She is known for organizing the art collective Yarn Bombing Los Angeles, a collective ranging from 20 to 500 crafters that creates public art through a crowdsourced, participatory model. She is the current director of Trans.lation, an arts and cultural platform initiated by Rick Lowe and commissioned by the Nasher Sculpture Center, located in the immigrant, refugee, Latino, and African American neighborhood of Vickery Meadow, Dallas, Texas.
